JEFFREY FOLTZ

IT Specialist, Contracting Officer Representative
National Science Foundation

Jeff has worked at the National Science Foundation (NSF) for over 30 years, primarily as an IT Specialist in the Division of Information Systems (DIS). He has held numerous positions during this tenure, including roles in Project Management, computer programming, Web design, Grants Management processing, customer support, and working as a Contracting Officer Representative (COR) for over a decade.

He currently serves as a Program Manager in the Customer Support branch of DIS, which oversees the NSF Service Desk. In this role, he manages several projects, including efforts during the recent health crises to bring Microsoft's robust, cloud-based, Windows Modern Management functionality to NSF's computer devices and network systems. This has provided NSF the ability to fully image, update, and manage workstations remotely, without users having to come onsite – which allows for increased mobility, and staff being able to work from any location in the world. In addition, Jeff operates as a COR for several large contracts, and serves as the primary liaison between their IT shop and the distributed IT Specialists throughout the Foundation.

During 2021-2022, Jeff had the tremendous honor to participate in the American University's prestigious Key Executive Leadership Program. In addition, he received the distinction of being selected by his cohort as one of the keynote speakers for their graduation in Spring 2022. Jeff was Blessed to have the opportunity to attain such high-level training and education as part of this renowned and acclaimed leadership program.

Outside of NSF, Jeff has been married to the Love of his life for over 34 years, and has 3 wonderful, grown sons, along with an amazing daughter-in-law (still waiting on the grandkids though....) :^)

Jeff and his wife have been lifelong musicians and have performed for over 40 years. However, their main passion is using their talents to Worship in church every Sunday.
