

CENTER FOR LATIN AMERICAN
& LATINO STUDIES
AMERICAN UNIVERSITY | WASHINGTON, DC

The Robert A. Pastor North America Research Initiative

Workshop Participants

El Colegio de México | August 23-24, 2018

Robert Blecker is a Professor in the Department of Economics at American University (AU), and an Affiliated Professor with the School of International Service (SIS) and the Center for Latin American & Latino Studies (CLALS) at AU. He holds a Ph.D. in Economics from Stanford University and completed graduate studies at the Centro de Estudios Económicos y Demográficos at El Colegio de México. Professor Blecker's research interests include international trade, open economy macroeconomics, the value of the dollar and the U.S. trade deficit, economic integration in North America, the Mexican economy, the limits to export-led growth strategies in developing countries, and U.S. trade policy. His teaching fields include international economics, macroeconomics, history of economic thought, and political economy. Most recently he wrote "Trumping the NAFTA Renegotiation: An Alternative Policy Framework for Mexican-U.S. Cooperation and Economic Convergence" (ECLAC, 2017).

Brian Bow is an Associate Professor of Political Science and Director of the Centre for the Study of Security and Development (formerly Centre for Foreign Policy Studies) at Dalhousie University, a research fellow with the Borders in Globalization project at University of Victoria, and a fellow at the Canadian Global Affairs Institute. He holds a Ph.D. in Government from Cornell University. His ongoing research projects include "The Political Management of Network-Driven Policy Coordination: Lessons from North America and Europe" and "The Making and Unmaking of North America," which explores the history of regional integration in North America. Professor Bow's recent publications include "Legitimacy and Regional Integration: The North American Experience in Perspective" in The Legitimacy of Regional Integration in Europe and the Americas (Palgrave Macmillan, 2015) and the co-edited volume Regional Governance in Post-NAFTA North America: Building without Architecture (Routledge, 2014). He was previously a visiting fellow at the Woodrow Wilson Center, American University, Georgetown University, Carleton University, and the Australian National University.

Rodolfo Casillas is a Professor and Researcher at FLACSO-Mexico. He holds a Ph.D. in History from Universidad Iberoamericana, and was previously a researcher at El Colegio de México. His research interests include migration, human trafficking, and organized crime in Central and North America. He is the editor of Aspectos sociales y culturales de la trata de personas en México (Inacipe, 2013). Prof. Casillas most recently contributed an article to the edited volume Handbook of Migration and Globalisation (Edward Elgar Publishing, 2018), "Migrants Passing through Mexico: A Look at what the Trump Presidency May Bring."

Manuel Ángel Castillo is a Professor at the Center for Demographic, Urban, and Environmental studies at El Colegio de México. He holds a Masters in Urban Development from El Colegio and a specialization in Public Administration from the Escola Nacional de Serviços Urbanos in Rio de Janeiro. His research focuses on violence, politics, Central American migration, and the sociopolitical dimension of borders.

Alejandro Castañeda is a Professor and Researcher at the Center for Economic Studies at El Colegio de México. He holds a Ph.D. in Economics from Stanford University. His research interests include

CENTER FOR LATIN AMERICAN & LATINO STUDIES

4400 MASSACHUSETTS AVENUE, NW WASHINGTON, DC 20016-8137 (202) 885-6178 FAX: (202) 885-6430

www.american.edu/clals

technology innovation and competency, oligopolistic dynamics, industrial productivity, and market power. He is the author of “Supermarkets: Price Competency” in the Journal of Mexican Economics.

Ernesto Castañeda is an Assistant Professor in the Department of Sociology at American University. He holds a Ph.D. in Sociology from Columbia University. Professor Castañeda previously taught at Columbia University, Baruch College-City University of New York, and the University of Texas-El Paso. He conducts research on migration, urban issues, health disparities, vulnerable populations, and social movements, and has published on remittances and development; integration and transnationalism; hometown associations and diaspora organizations; urban exclusion; the border fence; transnational families and the children of migrants left behind; health disparities within Hispanic, immigrant, public housing, and homeless populations. His most recent publication, A Place to Call Home: Immigrant Exclusion and Urban Belonging in New York, Paris, and Barcelona, was published by Stanford University Press in 2018. Professor Castañeda is also currently working with CLALS as a co-investigator on the project “Household Contexts and School Integration of Resettled Migrant Youth.”

Michael S. Danielson is Visiting Faculty at the University of California Washington Program (UCDC) and a former Research Fellow at CLALS. Since receiving his Ph.D. in Political Science from American University, he has taught Latin American politics and international affairs at George Washington University, and at the NYU and Pepperdine University programs in Washington, DC. He is also the author of Emigrants Get Political: Mexican Migrants Engage their Hometowns (Oxford University Press, 2017). Professor Danielson’s research has been published in numerous peer-reviewed and policy-oriented venues and he received Fulbright, National Science Foundation, and Gill Family Foundation grants to fund his dissertation survey and field research. As a practitioner, he has consulted for the Jesuit Conference of Canada and the United States and the Kino Border Initiative and previously served as a policy analyst for the Children's Defense Fund and the Center on Policy Initiatives.

Alexandra Délano Alonso is an Assistant Professor of Global Studies at The New School in New York City. She holds a Ph.D. in International Relations from the University of Oxford. Professor Délano works largely on U.S.-Mexico migration, and her book Mexico and its Diaspora in the United States: Policies of Emigration since 1848 (Cambridge University Press, 2011) was the co-winner of the William M. LeoGrande Prize for the best book on U.S.-Latin America Relations. Professor Délano is an associate editor for the journal Migration Studies and co-director of the Zolberg Institute on Migration and Mobility at The New School. Her latest book, From Here and There: Diaspora Policies, Integration, and Social Rights beyond Borders was published by Oxford University Press in 2018.

Gerardo Esquivel is a Professor in the Center for Economic Studies at El Colegio de México. He holds a Ph.D. in Economics from Harvard University. His research interests include income inequality in Mexico since NAFTA, growth and development, remittances, and political economy, among other topics. He is the co-editor of Growth, Protectionism and Crises: Latin America from a Historical Perspective (University of Chicago Press, 2007), and many articles, including “Desigualdad Extrema en México. Concentración del Poder Económico y Político” (OXFAM, 2015) and “A Decade of Falling Inequality in Mexico: Market Forces or State Action?” in Declining Inequality in Latin America: a Decade of Progress? (Brookings Institution Press, 2010).

Malcolm Fairbrother is a Professor in the Department of Sociology at Umeå University (Sweden), where he studies Canada, Mexico, the United States, and the creation of NAFTA. He was previously a Reader in Global Policy and Politics at the University of Bristol (United Kingdom). Originally from Vancouver, Canada, Professor Fairbrother holds a Ph.D. in Sociology from the University of California-Berkeley. He has published widely in various academic journals, including in the American Journal of

CENTER FOR LATIN AMERICAN & LATINO STUDIES

4400 MASSACHUSETTS AVENUE, NW WASHINGTON, DC 20016-8137 (202) 885-6178 FAX: (202) 885-6430

www.american.edu/clals

Sociology, “Economists, Capitalists and the Making of Globalization: North American Free Trade in Comparative-Historical Perspective” (2014).

Gaspere Genna is a Professor at The University of Texas at El Paso’s Political Science Department where he teaches graduate and undergraduate courses regarding European Union politics, North American relations, international relations, international organizations, and international political economy. His research interests are in explaining the development and impacts of regional integration in both economic and political dimensions. His work to date involves analyzing state incentives and capabilities for integration as well as domestic public support. He is the co-author of Regional Integration and Democratic Conditionality: How Democracy Clauses Help Democratic Consolidation and Deepening (Routledge, 2014) and Efectos Regionales Del Libre Comercio: El Caso Del Noreste De México (Pearson, 2015), as well as coeditor of North American Integration: An Institutional Void in Migration, Security and Development (Routledge, 2015).

Guadalupe González is a Professor and Coordinator in the Project for Public Opinion and Mexican Foreign Policy at El Colegio de México. She is a Ph.D. Candidate at the University of California-San Diego and holds a Masters in Sociology from the London School of Economics.

Louis Goodman is Professor and Dean Emeritus of the School of International Service at American University. He holds a Ph.D. from Northwestern University, and is an Affiliated Professor of Sociology at AU. Under his leadership, SIS became the largest school of international relations in the United States. Previously, Professor Goodman served on the faculty of Yale University’s Department of Sociology and as Director of the Latin American and Caribbean Programs of the Social Science Research Council and The Wilson Center. Professor Goodman carries out research on social change and politics in Latin America and in Asia. His current research focuses on public goods, regional alliances, and development. He has published widely on civil-military relations in Latin America, on foreign investment in developing countries, and on determinants of career success for blue-collar workers. He has authored many texts including The Military and Democracy in Latin America (Heath-Lexington, 1990)

Eduardo Guerrero Gutierrez is a Security Consultant at LANTIA Consultores, S.C. He is a Ph.D. candidate in Political Science at the University of Chicago and holds a Masters in Political Science from the University of Delaware. He is an expert in criminal violence analysis, transparency, and access to information.

Carlos Heredia is an Associate Professor at CIDE, where he was Chair of the Department of International Studies from 2010 to 2013. He served as a Member of Mexico’s 57th Congress from 1997 to 2000. Professor Heredia holds an undergraduate degree from McGill University (Canada), and pursued doctoral studies at the Universidad Nacional Autónoma de México (UNAM). He is a founding member and current Vice President of the Mexican Council on International Affairs (COMEXI). Professor Heredia was also part of the Independent Task Force on Building a North American Community, sponsored by the Council on Foreign Relations in 2005, as well as a member of the International Committee of the Latin American Migrant Community Summit. Since 2008, he has served on the Advisory Board of the Mexico Institute at the Wilson Center. Professor Heredia has authored numerous journal articles and half a dozen book chapters on economics, multilateral banks, international relations of subnational governments, migration, North American integration, and Mexico-China bilateral relations.

Eric Hershberg is Director of the Center for Latin American & Latino Studies and Professor of Government at American University. From 2007-2009 he was Professor of Political Science and Director of Latin American Studies at Simon Fraser University (SFU), in Vancouver, Canada. He received his Ph.D. from the University of Wisconsin-Madison, and has taught at New York University, Southern

CENTER FOR LATIN AMERICAN & LATINO STUDIES

4400 MASSACHUSETTS AVENUE, NW WASHINGTON, DC 20016-8137 (202) 885-6178 FAX: (202) 885-6430

www.american.edu/clals

Illinois University, Columbia, Princeton, and The New School. Prior to arriving at SFU he served for fifteen years as a Program Director at the Social Science Research Council in New York City. His research focuses on the comparative politics of Latin America, and on the politics of development. Current research projects analyze the state of democracy and emerging development strategies in South America, and the ways in which elites exercise power in Central America. He has served as a consultant to numerous development and educational agencies, including the Ford Foundation, the World Bank, and the Swedish International Development Agency.

José Luis Lezama a Professor at the Center for Demographic, Urban, and Environmental Studies at El Colegio de México as well as a guest lecturer at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology. He holds a Ph.D. in Social Sciences with a specialization in Environmental Politics from University College-London. His research focuses on the human construction of the world, politics of energy, and sustainability. He is the co-author of Los Grandes Problemas de México, a 16 volume collection that was published to commemorate El Colegio's 50th anniversary in 2010.

Tom Long is an Assistant Professor in New Rising World Powers in the Department of Politics and International Studies at the University of Warwick (UK). He was previously a Lecturer in International Relations at the University of Reading (UK) and a visiting professor in the Division of International Studies at CIDE. He holds a Ph.D. in International Relations from American University's School of International Service. Professor Long studies U.S.-Latin America relations, foreign policy, Latin American politics, and the role of small and middle powers in asymmetrical relations. He recently published Latin America Confronts the United States: Asymmetry and Influence (Cambridge University Press, 2015), which was named one of the best books of 2016 by Foreign Affairs.

Marcela López Vallejo is an Assistant Professor at CIDE-Región Centro in Aguascalientes. She holds a Ph.D. in International Relations and a Masters in North American Studies both from la Universidad de las Américas, Puebla (UDLAP). Her work centers on North American environmental politics, in particular the politics of climate change. She is the author of Reconfiguring Global Climate Governance in North America (Routledge, 2014) and co-author of Environmental Policy in North America: Approaches, Capacity, and the Management of Transboundary Issues (University of Toronto Press, 2015).

Gerardo Maldonado is an Assistant Professor and Researcher in the International Studies Division at CIDE, and a Doctoral Candidate in Political and Social Science at the Universidad Pompeu Fabra (Spain). He is the co-author of the article "Revisiting the Dark Side of Political Deliberation. The Effects of Media and Political Discussion on Political Interest" published in Public Opinion Quarterly (2014).

Inu Manak is a Ph.D. Candidate in the Department of Government at Georgetown University and a Visiting Scholar at the Cato Institute, specializing in international political economy, with an emphasis on trade and development. Her research focuses on the escalation of early stage trade conflicts and the role of private actors at the World Trade Organization (WTO), and challenges to legal capacity building in developing countries. Manak holds a M.A. in International Affairs at American University and a B.A. in Political Science at Simon Fraser University (Canada).

Claudia Masferrer Leon is a Professor in the Center for Demographic, Urban and Environmental Studies at El Colegio de México as well as adjunct faculty at McGill University. She holds a Ph.D. in Sociology from McGill University. Her scholarship bridges sociology and demography and examines how policy impacts immigration, immigrant integration, and family dynamics. She most recently published Connecting the Dots: Emerging Migration Trends and Policy Questions in North and Central America (Migration Information Source, 2018)

CENTER FOR LATIN AMERICAN & LATINO STUDIES

4400 MASSACHUSETTS AVENUE, NW WASHINGTON, DC 20016-8137 (202) 885-6178 FAX: (202) 885-6430

www.american.edu/clals

Claudia Maya is a Researcher at the Center for Research on North America (CISAN) and Professor at the National Autonomous University of México (UNAM). She holds a Ph.D. in Economics from UNAM, a Masters in Economics from the University of Missouri-Kansas City, and a Masters in Finance from the UNAM School of Accounting and Business Administration. Her research focuses on the study of international economics, in particular the changes in the North American financial system. She is currently working on a research project titled “Transformación de las estructuras financieras en los Estados Unidos y Canadá: un análisis prospectivo de la secularización.”

Asa McKercher is an Assistant Professor of History at Royal Military College of Canada and a Senior Fellow at the Bill Graham Centre for Contemporary International History. He was previously an Assistant Professor at McMaster University (Canada). He holds a Ph.D. in History from the University of Cambridge. Professor McKercher’s research concerns the history of Canadian international relations with a special interest in Canada-Latin America relations and in Canada-Cuba relations. Professor McKercher is the author of more than a dozen articles and chapters, and recently published Camelot and Canada: Canadian-American Relations in the Kennedy Era (Oxford University Press, 2016).

Juan Carlos Moreno is a Professor at la Universidad Nacional Autonoma de México. He holds a Ph.D. from Cambridge University. He has published several books on economic history and dynamics in Mexico and Latin America. Most recently he published Sistemas de Control de la Auditoría Superior de la Federación. Repensar la fiscalización y el control parlamentario en el ámbito nacional e internacional (2018).

Clarisa Pérez-Armendáriz is an Associate Professor at Bates College. She holds a Ph.D. in Government from the University of Texas-Austin. Her research explores how international migrants affect political and economic development in their origin countries, and specializes in Mexican politics and in U.S.-Mexico migration. Her article “Do Migrants Remit Democracy? International Migration, Political Beliefs, and Behavior in Mexico” (2009) was featured in the journal Comparative Political Studies. Professor Pérez-Armendáriz also served as a U.S. Foreign Service officer in Mexico City.

Jean Francois Prud’homme is a Professor and Coordinator at the Center for International Studies at El Colegio de México. He holds a Ph.D. in Political Science from York University in Toronto. His research focuses on the politics of opposition in Mexico as well as parties and political institutions in Latin America.

Jayesh Rathod is a Professor of Law at American University Washington College of Law, and founding Director of the law school’s Immigrant Justice Clinic. He is currently serving as the Interim Director of CLALS. Professor Rathod’s areas of expertise and scholarly interests include immigration law, labor and employment law, occupational safety and health, and clinical legal education. Prior to joining the faculty, he was a Staff Attorney at CASA of Maryland, representing low-wage immigrant workers on employment law and immigration matters, and participating in worker education, organizing, and advocacy efforts. He also practiced in the litigation section at Wilmer, Cutler & Pickering LLP, and was law clerk to the Honorable Louis F. Oberdorfer, of the United States District Court for the District of Columbia. He is a graduate of Columbia Law School and Harvard College. Professor Rathod has been recognized for his innovative teaching, including the use of technology and the promotion of bilingual education within U.S. law schools.

Isabelle Rousseau is a Professor and Researcher at El Colegio de México and an Associate Researcher at the Centre d’études et de Recherches Internationales at Science Po. She holds a Ph.D. in Sociology from the Ecole des Hautes Etudes en Sciences Sociales. Her research focuses on good governance of national oil and gas companies in Venezuela and Brazil, as well as oil and gas diplomacy in Latin America. She

CENTER FOR LATIN AMERICAN & LATINO STUDIES

4400 MASSACHUSETTS AVENUE, NW WASHINGTON, DC 20016-8137 (202) 885-6178 FAX: (202) 885-6430

www.american.edu/clals

recently published the article “Oil Reform: The National Data Repository as the Key Successful Factor of the Upstream Opening in Mexico” (OGEL, 2016).

José Arturo Santa Cruz is a Professor at the Center for Social Sciences and Humanities at the Universidad de Guadalajara and Director of the Center for North American Studies. He holds a Ph.D. in Political Science from Cornell University. His research focuses on International Relations theory, regional integration, and Mexican foreign policy. Most recently he published “U.S. Hegemony is what the President does of it: Foreign Policy and Multilateralism during the Obama Administrations” (University of Guadalajara, 2017)

Gema Santamaría is an Assistant Professor of Latin American History at Loyola University Chicago and a 2017-2018 Visiting Fellow at the Kellogg Institute for International Studies at the University of Notre Dame. Previously, she was an Assistant Professor and Director of the Undergraduate Program in International Relations at the Instituto Tecnológico Autónomo de México (ITAM). She holds a Ph.D. in Sociology and History from The New School. Professor Santamaría’s research focuses on violence and vigilantism in Mexico in the context of the relationship between the United States and Mexico. Her thesis on lynching violence in Mexico won the Charles Hale Prize for best dissertation on Mexican history from the Latin American Studies Association. She is the co-editor of Violence and Crime in Latin America: Representations and Politics (University of Oklahoma Press, 2017), and held a fellowship at the University of California-San Diego, Center for U.S.-Mexican Studies.

Jaime Sempere is a Professor and Director at the Center for Economic Studies at El Colegio de Mexico. He holds a Ph.D. in Economics from El Instituto Universitario Europeo in Florence. His research focuses on public economies, commerce, and the environment as well as political competency. Most recently he published the article “The Social Cost of Fishery Subsidy Reforms” (Marine Policy, 2017).

Sergio Silva is a Professor and Director at the Program for International Relations at Instituto Tecnológico Autónomo de México (ITAM), where he teaches history of the United States and Latin America. He holds a Ph.D. in History from Harvard University. Professor Silva has published works ranging from economic development in Latin America to political relations between the U.S. and Latin America. He most recently published “The Economic Project of the Mexican Revolution” (Fondo de Cultura Económica, 2010).

Daniela Stevens is a Ph.D. Candidate in Political Science at American University’s School of Public Affairs. She is a recipient of the 2014 Tinker Field Research Grant, which supported her dissertation research titled “Uniting behind Presidential Bills Even in a Divided Congress: Evidence from Mexico’s National and Subnational Legislatures.” Her research focuses on national and subnational policies that put a price on carbon emissions; she recently wrote a blog posting titled “Mexico: Tough Congressional-Executive Relations Ahead” (May 24, 2018) on American University’s Latin American Blog (AULA Blog), managed by CLALS.

Maria Celia Toro is a Professor and Coordinator of PROMEC in the Center for International Studies at El Colegio de México. She holds a Masters in Political Science from Stanford University and is currently a Ph.D. Candidate in Political Science at Stanford. Professor Toro’s research focuses on International Relations theory, big power politics, and as well as the U.S.-Mexico drug trade. She has written many articles including “The Internationalization of Police: The DEA in Mexico” (1999).

Blanca Torres is a Professor in the Center for International Studies at El Colegio de México. She holds a B.Phil. in Latin American Politics from the University of Oxford. Her research includes water management on the U.S.-Mexican border, the impact of transnational actors in Mexican politics, and Mexican foreign policy

CENTER FOR LATIN AMERICAN & LATINO STUDIES

4400 MASSACHUSETTS AVENUE, NW WASHINGTON, DC 20016-8137 (202) 885-6178 FAX: (202) 885-6430

www.american.edu/clals

Gustavo F. Vega Canovas is a Professor at El Colegio de México. He holds a Ph.D. in Political Science from Yale University. His research focuses on international political economy, the politics of economic development, and history of the U.S. and Canada. He recently published “Haiti: History and Dreams. Society, Art, and Culture” (El Colegio, 2017)

Christopher Wilson is the Deputy Director of the Mexico Institute at the Wilson Center, where he leads the Institute’s research and programming on regional economic integration and U.S.-Mexico border affairs. He is a Ph.D. Candidate in the School of Public Policy at The University of Maryland-College Park, focusing geographically on the United States, Mexico, and North America. He has authored several articles, including “Working Together: Economic Ties between the United States and Mexico” (Wilson Center, 2011) and “The State of the Border Report” (Wilson Center, 2013).

CENTER FOR LATIN AMERICAN & LATINO STUDIES

4400 MASSACHUSETTS AVENUE, NW WASHINGTON, DC 20016-8137 (202) 885-6178 FAX: (202) 885-6430

www.american.edu/clals