DC Central Kitchen

The 5,000 meals DCCCK dishes out every day are loaded into their fleet of trucks and distributed at little or no cost to 100 nearby homeless shelters, transitional homes, and nonprofit organizations, saving them money and nourishing their clients. Most importantly, these meals go out with a message: in the DCCCK main kitchen, they offer a rigorous Culinary Job Training program for unemployed men and women who want to replace homelessness, addiction, and incarceration with new careers and changed lives. Food can do so much more than fill stomachs: their mission is to use food as a tool to strengthen bodies, empower minds, and build communities.

SOME's Isaiah House Location

The Isaiah House is a program that runs under So Others Might Eat (SOME) and is a supportive environment for adults whose lives have been impacted by homelessness as well as by severe and persistent mental illness. SOME believes that appropriate day program services, designed to enhance an individual's resilience, can reduce the degree of vulnerability that these adults experience and ultimately contribute to breaking the cycle of homelessness and poverty that they face. The Isaiah House Day Program has three components: Drop-in Services, Psychosocial Support, and Membership. The core of all three activity areas is a supportive, strengths-based approach to working with vulnerable adults. Donation drop-offs are preferred during the COVID19 Pandemic.
