

SES Leadership Program

Program Summary

Extraordinary leadership is a combination of consciousness and competence. The capacity-building and development provided by the Key Executive Leadership SES Leadership Program focuses on both individual and collective leadership development. Those we lead today expect their agencies utilize their talent and drive in ways that are welcoming, interactive, collaborative, and less bureaucratic. They have a need to work for leaders who inspire trust, nurture environments of diversity, inclusion, equity and accessibility, and articulate a vision that connects them to their agency mission. Participants in the SES Leadership Program hone their relational skills and thinking capacity to mentor and develop others and increase employee engagement. They also develop the foresight, insight, and the competencies needed to create vision, meet their mission, execute strategic goals, obtain innovative ideas from employees, and foster the teamwork and conviction needed to address today's complex challenges.

This sequential, six-course program is designed based on the Office of Personnel Management Executive Core Qualifications (ECQs), and provides participants with ideas, techniques, experiential exercises, and contemplative reflections to apply those competencies directly to the challenges they face in the workplace. The SES Leadership Program is particularly appropriate for those in the Senior Executive Service, their deputies, and those serving in senior level positions.

Orientation

The program begins with a full day Orientation. The Orientation serves to familiarize participants with each other, the program staff, program requirements and logistics, policies, and expectations, provide team building opportunities, and ensure participants develop the level of trust needed for them to work collaboratively as a member of a cohort. Participants are exposed to an expanded and holistic perspective on well-being, mindfulness meditation practices to develop their resilience and non-judging awareness to their experience and patterns of behavior, skills on developing formal mindfulness habits for daily life, and information on how to stay balanced and resilient irrespective of external circumstances. The Orientation will also include an outline of the program including the program purpose, primary developmental areas, participant responsibilities, and an overview of the courses.

Through the creation of norms, expectations, and the development of social capital, participants create the relationships necessary to learn from the faculty, and, most importantly, from each other. The trusted, inclusive environment that is created during the Orientation session benefits participants by providing career-long support group, enabling knowledge transfer among the cross-functional mix of cohort participants, offering the opportunity to practice honest feedback, and encouraging the confidence to recreate the same environment with those they lead,

Senior leaders also receive a journal at Orientation that they will use, throughout the program, for self-reflective exercises. Journal writing is a well-established way to record, reflect, and continue to learn from experience. In the Advanced Leadership Development Program, journal writing will support both informational learning including the acquisition of course content, skills, and behaviors, as well as transformational learning including reflection on one’s habitual patterns and the values, assumptions, beliefs, and expectations that underlie one’s actions.

Courses

The courses are designed to challenge senior leaders on their leadership effectiveness, and what they might do in the future to become more impactful. These courses are delivered at the senior-leader level, with active classroom discourse on executive challenges in an unstable and unpredictable environment.

Course Descriptions

SELF-REFLECTION: DEFINING MY LEADERSHIP SELF (2 DAYS)

ECQS: LEADING CHANGE, LEADING PEOPLE, RESULTS DRIVEN, BUSINESS ACUMEN, BUILDING COALITIONS

This course is a deep self-exploration that challenges senior leaders to understand who they are at a higher level including their higher purpose and most deeply held values, assumptions, beliefs, and expectations that guide their actions. Creating trusting relationships is needed to lead others and it starts with knowing and appreciating oneself first. One simply cannot lead effectively, especially at the executive level, without going through the hard steps of developing oneself from within. For this reason, developing one's authentic presence is arguably the most important capacity any public sector leader can have in today's VUCA (volatility, uncertainty, complexity, ambiguity) world. Participants will gain deeper insights and self-awareness based on advanced personality and competency-based assessments and will apply what they learn about themselves through specified activities. They will also build on their knowledge and learn how to engage and inspire those they lead, and other leaders to continue their development and to be more self-aware and to continue their own development.

BUILDING AND SUSTAINING AN INSPIRED CULTURE (2 DAYS)

ECQS: LEADING CHANGE, LEADING PEOPLE, RESULTS DRIVEN, BUSINESS ACUMEN, BUILDING COALITIONS

In this course, senior leaders explore ways to instill an innovation mindset and culture within their organization and constantly improve how to relate to, interact with, and inspire people – which becomes more challenging at the executive level. They learn strategies for transmitting culture by what they pay attention to, measure, and control. The course also challenges participants to look at their personal leadership style, values, and impact. Leaders will be armed with ideas, actions and tools to better assess and implement changes to improve the operations of their organizations. A broad range of theories about organizations and emergent change is reviewed for the purpose of identifying important factors and dynamics to consider in diagnosing an organization at the executive level. The course identifies the issues and options involved in implementing organizational changes with attention to the role of an executive change agent and the importance of strategic planning as part of the visionary process. During the course, participants reflect on past and current experiences with organizational change in the public service and to prepare a strategic change management plan to address a real situation in their agency. Upon successful completion of the course, senior leaders are able to: contrast structural, human resources, political, and symbolic frameworks for understanding, assessing, and diagnosing organizations and organizational behavior; formulate reasoned hypotheses about important factors, forces, and issues to consider during the life of a change project; think through and develop a change management plan that covers the major considerations contributing to a successful change initiative; discriminate among the dynamics of organizational change, the human side of change, and the role of culture in organizational change; assess and compose language forms that promote a strategic vision, transformational learning and change; appraise the role(s) of leadership in a change effort and analyze their own change leadership thoughts, style, and inclinations not to change.

HOW TO DEVELOP THOSE I LEAD (2 DAYS)

ECQS: DEVELOPING OTHERS

In this course, executives address one of the more vexing challenges found in today's federal agencies - how to provide steady, continuous "streams" of feedback and coach those they lead in ways that leverage their strengths, overcome self-imposed limitations, and make progress toward realizing their full potential. Effective coaches inspire those they lead to set challenging developmental goals, establish a strategy for growth, and provide guidance and support as they experiment with new ways of thinking and behaving. When senior leaders invest time and energy in using coaching techniques, those they lead will reciprocate with their trust, commitment and loyalty. Participants will practice effective techniques for both challenging and supporting those they lead to unleash, and in some cases rediscover, their talent and to more effectively drive toward organizational goals.

THE FEDERAL BUDGET PROCESS – WORKING IT FOR SUCCESS (2 DAYS)

ECQS: RESULTS DRIVEN, BUSINESS ACUMEN

Executive face unique challenges when dealing with the Federal budget and process. In this course, participants will gain insight on how to engage the political environment—Congress, political appointees, OMB, and broader stakeholder groups from an executive level in the organization. Senior leaders will also evaluate the challenges and opportunities posed by effective strategic planning for marshalling scarce resources in a hyper-competitive environment.

POLITICAL SAVVY FOR RESULTS: EMPLOYING INFLUENCE TACTICS WITH INTEGRITY (2 DAYS)

ECQS: LEADING CHANGE, LEADING PEOPLE, BUSINESS ACUMEN, BUILDING COALITIONS

Many senior leaders are skilled and visionary, but they are often stymied by resistance to new ideas, power plays, deceptions, and sabotage. This course provides proven strategies to help participants succeed in the face of challenges to vision, reputation, or career goals. They will leave this course understanding how to apply politically astute tactics from an executive level position that honor principles of integrity and helps mobilize political support and legitimacy. Topics explored include: an appraisal of personal assumptions and beliefs about politics; why human nature precipitates unhealthy politics; how to best discriminate among deception and misleading information from adversaries and manage their identity; describing guidelines for persuasive communication; assessing how leaders can promote a network of allies and advance their ideas; and how to decipher unwritten organizational rules, along with the types of interventions or political tactics that will enhance an executive-level leader's ability to achieve publicly valuable goals.

LEADING WITH INTEGRITY (2 DAYS)

ECQS: LEADING CHANGE, LEADING PEOPLE, RESULTS DRIVEN, BUILDING COALITIONS

According to David Maister, “Winning the power to lead professionals is no easy task. Before a leader can be accepted, let alone succeed, autonomous professionals must agree to be influenced by that person.” How does a senior leader, then, earn followership? Do you have a track record of helping other people succeed? Do your core values inspire staff to operate with integrity in furthering the interests of staff, partners and the American public? The most precious thing a leader has is a reputation for common decency and a fierce resolve to drive positive change. A leader's ability to obtain followership is based on a personal commitment to: behave in ways that build trust; exhibit courage when important ethical issues are not being addressed; build an organizational culture that emphasizes integrity, service, and respect; control or redirect disruptive impulses and moods in yourself and others; model civility in everyday interactions and encourage it in others; and use ethical principles in trying to determine the right decision, especially when the answer is not simple or obvious. These themes will be explored in a highly interactive format that emphasizes dialogue and reflective thinking from the level of the executive. Participants will be engaged in facilitated discussions based on short readings, group exercises, and case analyses.
